1. Description of the Test

1.1 General Description

The Michigan Young Learners of English (MYLE) tests are a fun and motivating set of exams that assesses the English of young learners in the primary and middle grades. The tests are developed by Michigan Language Assessment in association with Cambridge Assessment English, and cover all four language skills: listening, reading, writing, and speaking.

The MYLE is a set of three exams that provide a clear and transparent assessment of a young learner's English across three levels: Bronze (beginner), Silver, and Gold (early intermediate). The tests are international, focusing on American English. Of primary importance is that the testing experience has a positive impact on children and on their subsequent language learning.

Michigan Language Assessment is committed to the excellence of its tests, which are developed in accordance with the highest standards in educational measurement. All parts of the examination are written following specified guidelines, and items are pretested to ensure that they function properly. Michigan Language Assessment works closely with test centers to ensure that its tests are administered following set procedures, in a way that is fair and accessible to test takers and that the MYLE is open to all people who wish to take the exam. Test preparation resources are available on the Michigan Language Assessment website.

2. Scoring and Reporting of Results

2.1 Explanation of Scoring

The center where the child takes the test sends the completed test booklets to a team of highly trained raters, who score the responses carefully. To make sure that each child gets the fairest possible result, all test booklets are checked twice. For most parts of the test, spelling is required to be correct. Both British and American English spellings are accepted. The speaking examiner scores the speaking portion of the exam. Then, the speaking scores, along with the completed listening and reading and writing booklets, are returned to Michigan Language Assessment.

2.2 Procedures for Reporting Scores

Each test taker will receive a certificate that shows which level of the MYLE was taken, and how many medals he or she earned. The maximum total score is fifteen medals, five for each of the three test sections.

3. Interpreting MYLE Results

The MYLE is a set of three exams that provides an assessment of a young learners' English at the early beginner (Bronze) through early intermediate (Gold) levels. Each level is administered and scored separately. Test takers can earn a maximum of five medals for each test section. A result of only one medal for a section means the child can improve significantly in that skill, while a result of five medals means that the child did very well in that skill and answered most questions correctly. With a total score of 10 medals or more across all three sections, a test taker should be ready to start preparing for the next level of the MYLE.

When interpreting MYLE results, it is important to remember that the MYLE estimates a test taker's true proficiency by approximating the kinds of tasks that may be encountered in real life. Also, temporary factors unrelated to a test taker's proficiency, such as fatigue, anxiety, or illness, may affect the exam results. Table 4 provides a summary of the type of language activity that young learners at each of the levels are likely to be able to accomplish.

4. Test-Taking Population

This section presents an overview of the test takers who took the MYLE in 2018, providing demographic information for the test population. Every test taker completed a registration form which asked for their gender and date of birth. Cases where information was

5.2 Distribution of Results by Section

Table 9 presents the distribution of the test takers by number of medals for each section of the exam. The data suggests that test takers generally perform best on the speaking section, regardless of the MYLE level they have taken.

5.3 Speaking Examiner Performance

The examiners for the speaking test are highly proficient speakers of English who are trained and certified according to standards set by Michigan Language Assessment.
