General Information

- MET Go! is a general English proficiency test designed for learners of middle to secondary school age.
- MET Go! is aimed at levels A1 to B1 of the Common European Framework of Reference (CEFR). The CEFR describes language proficiency at six main levels, from A1-A2 (Basic User), B1-B2 (Independent User) to C1-C2 (Proficient User).
- The overall CEFR level reported is an average of the sections tested.
- Detailed personalized feedback is provided on the back of this score report.
- A section score of X means the test taker was exempt from that section. A section score of 0 means the test taker did not attempt the section, or their answer was not on topic.
- Because language proficiency can change over time, if a significant amount of time has passed since the test was taken, score users should consider the test taker's subsequent experience with English in addition to the test scores themselves.
- Michigan Language Assessment reserves the right to update results or test taker information.
- Institutions may verify results at: MichiganAssessment.org.

➔ Continue Your English Language Learning

We looked carefully at your answers on the test so we can tell you more about your English. Below is information about what you are good at, what to improve, and things you can do next. Keep learning!

About Your English

You can understand short and simple things that you hear, but conversations and talks are more difficult for you. When listening, you get the main points, but try to listen for the details, too. Also, work on understanding how speakers feel about their topics and the reasons they're talking. Your knowledge of grammar helps you when you listen. However, learning more English words can help you understand more of what you hear.

Things To Do

Listen to English songs and watch English TV shows for younger people. Write down the things you remember and listen again to see how much you understood.

You can understand many of the details in short, simple readings. You can sometimes find the main idea or purpose, too. When you read, you also understand how sentences connect to each other. You know many basic words in English, and they usually help you to understand what you read. You know simple grammar and some more difficult grammar, and it helps you to read as well.

Find a book written for your language level. Can you understand the main idea of each paragraph? Ask your teacher if you need help choosing a book to read.

You can write about your personal experiences. Practice writing stories and writing about your opinions, too. You sometimes use details in your writing. However, try to include more information to make your writing more interesting. You use connecting words when you write, but the reader cannot always follow your ideas. Try to plan what you want to say before you write. You usually use grammar and vocabulary well. You also include some advanced words correctly. However, try including a variety of long and short sentences, too.

To improve your writing, think about your favorite movie or book. Write English sentences about the things they do in the story. Write what they do first, second, and so on.
